

ABSTRACT

[0010] Piston pinholes in a skirt section of a combustion engine piston have a surface formed with circular crater-shaped indentation. The indentations are introduced into the piston pinhole surfaces at room temperature by a blasting medium, such as a shot-peening medium, with a definite grain.